But with no advance coming in and her royalties dipping to an all-time low, Kitty has no choice. Armed with a hot-guy spinning prize wheel, made by her best friend, listing all the different types of men she will date and then write about, Kitty will be spinning—not stripping—her way back onto the best-sellers list. And in the process, she just might write her own happily ever after.

His blue eyes, adorable accent, and charm instantly won me over—right after his lips did. And I started to think that London might not be so bad. But then I met Noah. He's tall, dark, intense, and spends way too much time in the shower. I know this because I have to live with him. And did I mention that he hates me? My first day at school is more eventful than I anticipated. A boy named Mohammad takes me under his wing, declares himself my guide to the "hostile and hormonal battlefield that is Kensington School," and lays three facts on me: He, Harry, and Noah are best mates. I'm the new girl and bound to cause drama. And I've already got his boys all twisted up. I'm in way over my head, and it's only my first day!

They're going to send her on an all-expenses paid eco-trip to Costa Rica. She doesn't know what that means, but she assumes she'll wear fabulous clothes, sip Pi a Coladas on the beach, and have her photo taken "out in nature." Really, the hardest part of the assignment will be giving up social media while she's gone. Going off social media is no big deal for London-based wildlife photographer, Adam Lloyd. The only reason he even has an account is to share his photos with the world. He's thrilled when an international publication wants to hire him, until he finds out it's a fashion magazine. He decides to take the job anyway--after all, it will be great for his portfolio. But the minute he sees Camille, he knows it was a mistake. She has too much luggage, is too high maintenance, and way too pretty. When they meet, their feelings are mutual--they hate each other. Can these two stop fighting long enough to complete their assignment? Will Camille give up and go home when she discovers there's nowhere to plug in her hair straightener? Or will they both realize that sometimes you have to go off the grid to find yourself?
